

GREAT FUND PLANNED FOR FARM RELIEF

50 STUDENTS GET DIPLOMAS AS GRADUATES

Solemnity Marks Seventy-first Annual Commencement at High School.

A certain solemnity marked the seventy-first annual commencement exercises Tuesday night of the Circleville high school for the class of 1929, at the high school auditorium, where the youthful attractiveness of the participants drew an overflowing audience of intensely interested friends and relatives. Not until the speaker of the evening, Dr. W. G. Clippinger, president of Otterbein university, opened his excellent address with a bit of humor, was the unusual solemn attitude of the graduates changed to their more natural, smiling expressions.

The program was opened by C. F. Zanglein's high school orchestra which played a Mozart overture, "Così Fan Tutte," quite an undertaking for the organization, but most satisfactorily played. This was followed by a selection by the mixed Glee club, composed of the finest voices in school, trained to real harmony and delightful tone by Miss Helen Wittich. The Rev. E. S. Toennies offered a fitting invocation especially directed to the graduating students and to their parents, many of whom had made sacrifices that their sons and daughters might be there on the stage on graduation night. This prayer preceded a second number by the mixed Glee club, "Morning," a melodious song, well sung with beautiful modulation.

ULM IS SALUTATORIAN
Kenneth Ulm, salutatorian made the greeting address from the stage, speaking on aviation and along other scientific lines.

Elliott Barnhill, one of the graduates, sang with ease two baritone solos, "My Ship," and "Star Eyes." Miss Wittich accompanied him at the piano. Irma Rader delivered, as the valedictory of the class, a simple address on the beauties of Ohio. It was not at all bookish, and was the relation of her own enjoyment derived from her visits to the beauty spots of the Buckeye state. Her words were referred to, several times, by Dr. Clippinger, in his address.

"Be the Best of Whatever You Are," was the first selection of the Girls' Glee club, a song especially adaptable to the occasion. Their second offering was "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," a comparative recent ballad. The young voices were especially lovely in this number.

STRESSES MENTAL QUALITY
Dr. Clippinger's address followed. He is no cut and dried speaker admonishing graduates on this and that, but is a speaker of broad minded knowledge, with a reputation gained through his thoroughly up-to-date, through his constant study of students. He was introduced by Superintendent Eagleson.

Dr. Clippinger said that he knew his audience was more interested in the boys and girls on the stage, than in him, but that they should not hide this fact, because he was himself more interested in them than he was in the audience in front of him. There was a bit of humor in his address in the beginning that produced the proper atmosphere for what he was going to say. This for the most part dealt with what he termed "Things not in the curriculum." He spoke of the mode in education. (Turn to Page Five)

MAKES RECORD IN ATTENDING SCHOOL

Mildred Garner wins the laurels so far in school records, having attended school for the past three years without an absence. She is the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garner of S. Pickaway-st. and is a student at Corwin school.

Other records for school children established in the last year at the sixth grade at High-st. school were made by George Ammer, Ernestine Eylan, Isadore Heskett, Ned Plum and Francis McGinnis, who were neither absent nor tardy in all the weeks of school. George Roth has not been absent during the same period of time, but his lagging foot steps chalked up one mark of tardiness.

Mr. and Mrs. John Link of Chicago, are guests at the residence of Dan Eitel of Pontious Lane, and other relatives in the city.

New Italian Resort Is Drawing Patrons of Gaming Paradise.

Will revolt No. 3 mean the passing of Monte Carlo as Europe's playground and the gambler's paradise? Within the past six months two revolts have already taken place. The first, last December, was mild; the second in March, was a violent uprising, although small in scope.

This month the general elections will take place, so storm clouds are gathering once more. The natives of Monaco, believing they have been ill-treated by their ruler and by the syndicate controlling the gambling Casino, are seething with anger.

If the revolt becomes an actuality, it is a question whether the tiny state of Monaco will attempt to depose Prince Louis and proclaim a republic.

Most important of all to the rich Americans who are the chief patrons of Monte Carlo, will be the famous place, which is already slipping, lose all its glory?

There are two Monte Carlos—one is the Monte of magnificent hotels, beautiful promenades. That one is an oasis of wealth and splendor. But behind this is the Monte Carlo of dirty, narrow, back streets. This is the Monte Carlo of the natives that has become the storm center.

The story behind the revolt goes back to the Treaty of Versailles, when the natives learned that their independence had been signed away to France by a secret treaty drawn up by the late ruler, Albert I. father of the present ruler. By this treaty it is claimed Monaco was made virtually part and parcel of the French Republic. And lately France has installed common customs duties, and wishes to make the Monagasques pay taxes to France.

Of the many reasons adduced for the decline of Monte Carlo, the one most frequently heard, is the action of Mussolini in establishing a rival gaming resort that bids fair to outshine Monte. In the nearby Italian Riviera is the beauty spot of San Remo.

Last winter saw a huge influx of regular Monte Carlo habitués to Mussolini's new gambling paradise. And when the nearby French resort of Cannes started a publicity campaign to draw the rest of the faithful to their Casino, the syndicate called a hurried meeting to decide what action should be taken.

Thus the situation has shaped itself and the revolt that Louis contemptuously dubbed "a tempest in a teacup" may yet depose an unbroken dynasty for over eight hundred years. For the moment there is a lull, but soon the click of the roulette wheel may be drowned out by rifle fire, and the cries of an angry people.

LABORITE IS TO ORGANIZE NEW CABINET

J. Ramsay MacDonald Commissioned To Take Over English Government.

LONDON, June 5 — King George, who is lying ill in Windsor Castle, today formally commissioned J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the labor party, to form a new cabinet.

The new labor government will succeed the conservative ministry headed by Stanley Baldwin, resigned. Mr. MacDonald, who had been summoned to Windsor by the king yesterday, after the resignation of the Baldwin government had been accepted, arrived at Windsor castle shortly after 11 o'clock this morning just as the castle guard was being changed. He was accompanied by his son, Malcolm MacDonald who was elected to the house of commons in the recent general election.

CABINET DISCUSSED
Even before he had received the royal commission to form a cabinet, Mr. MacDonald and other leaders of the labor party had discussed the probable make up of the labor government.

Labor comes into power as a result of the great gains made in last Thursday's election. The labor party will have more seats than any other party in the new house of commons, but will lack an absolute majority.

There are still no definite indications as to the complexion of the cabinet MacDonald will form, but it is likely MacDonald himself will take virtual charge of the foreign affairs portfolio although someone will be nominally appointed to that post.

HUNT RECEIVES TERM IN JAIL

Circleville Man Admits Stealing Spoons and Forks At Chillicothe.

Forest Hunt, 22, of Circleville, has begun to serve a sentence of 30 days in the Chillicothe jail and take care of a fine of $50 and costs after being sentenced Tuesday morning by Mayor Gunning on a plea of guilty to a charge of petit larceny.

Hunt, of Circleville has been in the employ of the construction company at the Mead Pulp and Paper Co.

A call came into the office of Grover Goshorn late Monday from an unknown party stating that Hunt had some Mead Pulp and Paper company property in his possession at his room in a rooming house in Chillicothe. Mrs. Carrie Griesheimer, who has charge of the Mead dining room, was taken to identify the stolen property. She identified several spoons and forks with the company stamp upon them in his room.

Other articles, which Hunt could not account for, were found in his room and it is believed by police that it is loot from other sources.

ASHES TO BE CAST OFF COURT HOUSE

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., June 5.—An impressive funeral ceremony will be held on the roof of the Fayette-co court house when last rites are administered to Billy Peele Willet, 71-year-old philanthropist, who died Sunday in Florence, Ala.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but one request which the former resident of this city made, just before he was overtaken by death, will be observed. Billy, during his last moments asked that his ashes be tossed to the winds.

He specified the roof of the Fayette-co court house as the scene for his last grand gesture—so from there his ashes will be distributed out by the countryside that he loved so well.

Banks of Pickaway-co Receive Samples of Smaller Paper Currency.

The new paper currency, which will be distributed locally through the Pickaway-co banks soon, is smaller than the bills now in circulation. The new currency is 2 1/2x6 5/8 and each bill bears the portrait of some prominent American.

The portrait will identify the denomination of the bill and will thus make counterfeiting more difficult.

Bills of eleven denominations with portraits as follows, will be issued: Washington, $1; Jefferson, $2; Lincoln, $5; Hamilton, $10; Jackson, $20; Grant, $50; Franklin, $100; McKinley, $500; Cleveland, $1000; Madison, $5,000; Chase, $10,000.

All bills of $100 and under, except the ones will have engravings of buildings on the back, such as Monticello, U. S. treasury, Lincoln Memorial and others. Samples of the $1, $2, $5, and $10 bills are now at the banks.

While the Bureau of Engraving has been working on the new bills of reduced size, for about two years, it is a tremendous undertaking to replace the millions of notes now in circulation. However, the treasury department plans to issue these new bills not later than July 1, and banks will not put them in circulation until after they have received the word from the government.

SHOOTS WIFE ON AUTO RIDE

Columbus Man Surrenders After Killing—Asks To Be Killed.

COLUMBUS, O., June 5 — "I don't know why I did it. I wish you would shoot me." This was the pathetic statement made to police today by Albert Gunning, 30, just 12 hours after he had shot and killed his wife as they were riding in an automobile on a north-side road last night.

His wife, Anna Haggy Gunning, 28 was brought to a local hospital by the husband, and he waited there until his wife had died and then surrendered to police.

He declared to authorities that there had been no quarrel. "I don't know why I did it. I wasn't feeling well lately. I'm nervous and I can't sleep. I don't know what I'm doing. I wish you'd shoot me."

Those few short sentences were the only information the admitted slayer could give to police. The Gunnings have two children.

2 VILLAGES HIT BY MT. VESUVIUS

NAPLES, June 5.—Out with renewed violence, the famous volcano, Mt. Vesuvius, continued to belch a constant stream of lava today, completely engulfing two villages and threatening destruction of several others.

One branch of the smoldering mass, 200 yards wide and 24 feet high, swallowed up the village of Pagan shortly after the village of Campitelli had been engulfed. Residents of both places had fled before the lava reached their homes.

WELL KNOWN OHIO MASON IS CALLED

CINCINNATI, O., June 5 — Harry E. Engelhardt, 60, deputy grand master of the Ohio Masons is orders, and three term mayor of the village of Norwood, near here, is dead today having succumbed to a short illness.

According to members of the Maconic lodge here, Engelhardt was to have been elected grand master of Ohio at the annual meeting in October.

He was recognized as one of the most prominent Masons in the state. He recently refused a fourth nomination to the office of mayor of his "home-town."

NEW MEASURE WILL PROVIDE 500 MILLIONS

Hoover Approves Proposal To Extend Money For Price Stabilizing.

WASHINGTON, June 5 — A government fund of $500,000,000 will be provided by congress, with the approval of President Hoover, for the immediate relief of American agriculture as soon as the new farm bill becomes a law, it was learned today by International News Service.

The new federal farm board, with broad powers for stabilizing farm prices, will be established at one and probably will begin functioning by July 1. The board is to turn over a wheat stabilization corporation, at the instance of cooperative associations, to stabilize the prices of the wheat crop, now about to be harvested. The corporation probably will get under way by July 15.

WATSON EXPLAINS
This program was revealed by Senator James E. Watson (R) of Indiana, Republican leader of the senate, who said it would meet with Mr. Hoover's approval. Watson further stated that from $100,000,000,000 to $500,000,000 would be placed at the disposition of the wheat stabilization corporation so that it can handle the entire crop.

This will be the answer of the Hoover administration and congress to the raids upon wheat prices by "short-sellers" on the Chicago board of trade. After beating wheat prices down to below a dollar for the first time in years, the "short-sellers" of "wheat bears" took a "short-swing" when wheat prices recovered this week.

The administration's plan definitely will be to drive "bears" to the wall in order to eliminate fictitious under-values and give the farmer a real return on his crop.

EARLY PASSAGE HOPED
With an agreement on the farm bill pending between the senate and conferees, administration leaders hope to win the measure into law within a week. Thus would be in line with the administration's program to start congress from next week.

Sept. 9, but it likewise will speed the setting up of the government's relief machinery before the bulk of the present wheat crop hits the market.

Senator McNary (R) of Oregon, and Rep. Haugen (R) of Iowa, chairman of the senate and house agriculture committee, both agreed with Watson that the whole $500,000,000 government revolving fund should be made available at once as the farm bill becomes law.

PRIEST SHOTS YOUNG WOMAN

Pretty Church Worker Near Death—Over Study Believed Cause.

NEWARK, N. J., June 5 — Miss Helen Halaites, pretty 30-year-old church worker, was near death in St. Michael's hospital here early today from two bullet wounds inflicted by the Rev. Paul Mierzvins, 35, former pastor of a Lithuanian Roman Catholic church after she had rejected his advances.

The priest, whose mind apparently had been deranged by over study, fired a bullet into his brain after shooting the girl in the breast twice. He died shortly after he had been rushed to the hospital.

The shooting took place last night at the Harrison, N. J. home of Mrs. Rosa Silkaitis, a friend of the girl. Father Mierzvins, who had been in Chicago and in Amsterdam, N. Y., had been conversing with Miss Halaites in the parlor. According to Mrs. Silkaitis, the priest asked the girl for a kiss and was rebuffed. Then the girl screamed as three shots rang out.

Earlier in the day the priest had told an associate, the Rev. George Fitzpatrick, that "the Bolsheviks were after him." Police believe he became deranged suddenly.

Mrs. Evan Reichert is spending Wednesday in Columbus.

WOOL CLIP TO BE ASSEMBLED

Pickaway-Co Co-op Offers Advance Payment On This Year's Crop.

Pickaway-co sheep and wool growers will assemble their 1929 wool clip through the Pickaway-Co Farm Bureau on Friday, June 7. Arrangements have been completed this year for an advance payment of 22 cents per pound on all wool upon its arrival at the Wool Growers Cooperative warehouse. This advance will be made without a direct interest charge to the wool producer. The Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative association has successfully completed eleven years operation through which a definite system of grading, storing, insurance and salesmanship have been administered through the growers own organization.

The Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative association is recognized as one of the most successful commodity organizations in the United States. Pickaway-co sheep and wool growers have had a part in building this service.

Arrangements have been completed to receive wool on Friday, June 7, from 7 a. m. to 12 m., at the following locations: Atlanta shipping pens, Mt. Sterling shipping pens, Cooperative Livestock yards in Circleville and at the farm of C. E. Cromley at Ashville.

Glenn Grimes will have charge of the collection at Atlanta, Harry J. Briggs at Mt. Sterling, A. C. Leist at Circleville and C. E. Cromley at Ashville.

Half Million New Customers Gained From Advertising

NEW YORK, June 5.—Five hundred thousand new customers were obtained in the course of two weeks through the use of newspaper advertisements by the United Cigar stores, it was announced today.

A. C. Allen, executive vice president of United, said the check-up was conservative and followed an announcement of price reductions. Allen said "It indicates the value of newspaper advertising in comparison with all other forms of merchandising."

YOUTH AT ORIENT DROWNS IN CREEK

Edwin Nuby, 14, colored, of Cleveland, an inmate of the Orient feebleminded asylum, drowned Saturday while swimming in a creek on the farm with 200 other younger inmates of the institution. The lad was missed when the other swimmers prepared to return to the asylum. A search was instigated by attendants and the boy's body was recovered a half hour later at the bottom of a seven foot pool. Dr. C. E. Bowers county recorder, returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

PLANS DISCUSSED

Robert S. Harsh, Columbus, architect for the municipal hospital, met with the hospital board in Circleville Tuesday night to discuss the plans which are being rapidly completed. A report on the plans will be made to the city council at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

George McDowell of W. Mount-st has returned from a business visit in Cleveland and Akron.

Little Girl, Ill, Crying For Her Missing Pet Dog

There is a little sick girl over in Darbyville, who cries most of the day and night because her dog, "Ring," is lost. He wandered away in Circleville on Memorial Day, and no clue of him has been found. "Ring" is nothing to look at, just a nondescript black pup, so long and so high, with a white ring around his neck and some tan on his hind legs, and boasts a very bushy tail.

The little girl, who is crying for her pet, is critically ill with tuberculosis, and her days are thought to be numbered. She is Bessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Lowery of Darbyville, and the little dog has been the only sunshine in her life for many weeks. Now he is gone. Can't anyone find the dog? A reward of $10 has been posted for the return of the dog alive and well. His description has been sent over the radio from Columbus, with no success, although many dogs have been located that resemble "Ring."

OHIO STATE PENITENTIARY COLUMBUS, O., June 5 — One convict lies between life and death in the hospital here, while posses are scouring the wooded hills of southern Ohio counties in search for his three pals, who successfully negotiated an escape from the Junction City Brick plant of the penitentiary.

The four made the break from the clay pit of the brick plant near New Lexington late yesterday afternoon. Three of the convicts made good their escape. The fourth may pay with his life for the attempt.

Stanley Starr, 20, Cleveland, was felled by a bullet from the high-powered rifle of a guard as he and his three co-conspirators in the delivery were climbing the stockade fence around the brick plant.

He was rushed to the hospital here, and today physicians declared he had "half a chance."

Those still at large are: Henry Schara, 19, Cleveland, serving two to seven years for receiving stolen property.

Raymond Crooks, 31, Toledo, serving one to 15 years for burglary and larceny.

Clarence Ragland, 24, Toledo, serving two to 12 years for automobile stealing.

Year's Crop.

Pickaway-co sheep and wool growers will assemble their 1929 wool clip through the Pickaway-Co Farm Bureau on Friday, June 7. Arrangements have been completed this year for an advance payment of 22 cents per pound on all wool upon its arrival at the Wool Growers Cooperative warehouse. This advance will be made without a direct interest charge to the wool producer. The Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative association has successfully completed eleven years operation through which a definite system of grading, storing, insurance and salesmanship have been administered through the growers own organization.

The Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative association is recognized as one of the most successful commodity organizations in the United States. Pickaway-co sheep and wool growers have had a part in building this service.

Arrangements have been completed to receive wool on Friday, June 7, from 7 a. m. to 12 m., at the following locations: Atlanta shipping pens, Mt. Sterling shipping pens, Cooperative Livestock yards in Circleville and at the farm of C. E. Cromley at Ashville.

Glenn Grimes will have charge of the collection at Atlanta, Harry J. Briggs at Mt. Sterling, A. C. Leist at Circleville and C. E. Cromley at Ashville.

Half Million New Customers Gained From Advertising

NEW YORK, June 5.—Five hundred thousand new customers were obtained in the course of two weeks through the use of newspaper advertisements by the United Cigar stores, it was announced today.

A. C. Allen, executive vice president of United, said the check-up was conservative and followed announcement of price reductions. Allen said "It indicates the value of newspaper advertising in comparison with all other forms of merchandising."

YOUTH AT ORIENT DROWNS IN CREEK

Edwin Nuby, 14, colored, of Cleveland, an inmate of the Orient feeble-minded asylum, drowned Saturday while swimming in a creek on the farm with 200 other younger inmates of the institution.

The lad was missed when the other swimmers prepared to return to the asylum. A search was instigated by attendants and the boy's body was recovered a half hour later at the bottom of a seven foot pool. Dr. C. E. Bowers, county recorder, returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

PLANS DISCUSSED

Robert S. Harsh, Columbus, architect for the municipal hospital, met with the hospital board in Circleville Tuesday night to discuss the plans which are being rapidly completed. A report on the plans will be made to the city council at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

George McDowell of W. Mound-st has returned from a business visit in Cleveland and Akron.

NEW MEASURE WILL PROVIDE 500 MILLIONS

Hoover Approves Proposal To Extend Money For Price Stabilizing.

WASHINGTON, June 5 — A government fund of $500,000,000 will be provided by congress, with the approval of President Hoover, for the immediate relief of American agriculture as soon as the new farm bill becomes a law, it was learned today by International News Service.

The new federal farm board, with broad powers for stabilizing farm prices, will be established at one and probably will begin functioning by July 1. The board in turn will create a wheat stabilization corporation, at the instance of cooperative associations, to take immediate steps toward stabilizing the prices of the wheat crop, now about to be harvested. The corporation probably will get under way by July 15.

WATSON EXPLAINS
This program was revealed by Senator James E. Watson (R) of Indiana, Republican leader of the senate, who said it would meet with Mr. Hoover's approval. Watson further stated that from $100,000,000,000 to $200,000,000 would be placed at the disposition of the wheat stabilization corporation so that it can handle the entire crop.

This will be the answer of the Hoover administration and congress to the raids upon wheat prices by "short-sellers" on the Chicago board of trade. After beating wheat prices down to below a dollar for the first time in years, the "short-sellers" or "wheat bears," took a financial lacing when wheat values advanced this week.

The administration's plan incidentally will be to drive these "bears" to the wall in order to eliminate fictitious under-values and give the farmer a reasonable return on his crop.

EARLY PASSAGE HOPED

With an agreement on the new farm bill pending between house and senate conferees, administration leaders hope to write the measure into law within a week. Thus would be in line with the administration's program to recess congress from next week until Sept. 9, but it likewise will permit the setting up of the government's relief machinery before the bulk of the present wheat crop hits the market.

Senator McNary (R) of Oregon, and Rep. Haugen (R) of Iowa, chairman of the senate and house agriculture committee, both agreed with Watson that the whole $500,000,000 government revolving fund should be made available as soon as the farm bill becomes law.

PRIEST SHOOT YOUNG WOMAN

Pretty Church Worker Near Death—Over Study Believed Cause.

NEWARK, N. J., June 5 — Miss Helen Halitaes, pretty 20-year-old church worker, was near death in St. Michaels hospital here early today from two bullet wounds inflicted by the Rev. Paul Miezinis, 35, former pastor of a Lithuanian Roman Catholic church after she had rejected his advances.

The priest, whose mind apparently had been deranged by over study, fired a bullet into his brain after shooting the girl in the breast twice. He died shortly after he had been rushed to the hospital.

The shooting took place last night at the Harrison, N. J. home of Mrs. Rosa Silkat, a friend of the girl. Father Miezinis, who had been in Chicago and in Amsterdam, N. Y., had been conversing with Miss Halitaes in the parlor. According to Mrs. Silkat, the priest asked the girl for a kiss and was rebuffed. Then the girl screamed as three shots rang out.

Earlier in the day the priest had told an associate, the Rev. George Fitzpatrick, that "the Bolsheviks were after him." Police believe he became deranged suddenly.

Mrs. Evan Reichelderfer spent Wednesday in Columbus.

MAKES RECORD IN ATTENDING SCHOOL

Mildred Garner wins the laurels so far in school records, having attended school for the past three years without an absence. She is the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garner of S. Pickaway-st and is a student at Corwin-st school.

Other records for school children established in the last year at the sixth grade at High-st school were made by George Ammer, Ernestine Eyllar, Isadell Heskett, Ned Plum and Francis McGinnis who were neither absent nor tardy in all the weeks of school. George Roth has not been absent during the same period of time, but his lagging foot steps chalked up one mark of tardiness.

Mr. and Mrs. John Link of Chicago, are guests at the residence of Dan Eitel of Pontious Lane, and other relatives in the city.

RARE CAST IS SEEN IN FILM

Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovitch Co-starred in "The Three Passions."

Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovitch are co-stars in Rex Ingram's first United Artists Picture, which opens at the Cliftona on Wednesday. It is the third picture in which they have played under Ingram's direction. Founded on the novel by Cosmo Hamilton, "The Three Passions" is the first enterprise of the new British company, St. George's Productions, Ltd., of which Capt. Alastair Mackintosh is the managing director. St. George's is thought to have made a sensational start in production by capturing Ingram when so many were anxious to have his first story of British life.

Money, religion, Love are "The Three Passions" which, clashing in the surroundings of modern London, as they have through the ages, provide Rex Ingram with the motif for this latest film. Shalee Gardner, well known on the British stage, and screen; Eames, famous as a Shakespearean actress, and who has played Queen Elizabeth on the screen; Andrews Engleman, the screen actor, who made a name in "Mare Nostrum," and Leslie Faber, well known in both London and New York theaters, are leading members of the strong cast of "The Three Passions."

"THE COLLEGE HERO"

Pauline Garon, Robert Agnew and Ben Turpin are starred at the Grand theater tonight in "The College Hero," a battle of human emotions. He tried to ruin his friend and defeat his school but learned that friendship surmounts revenge. Educational Comedy and Fox News also will be shown.

"KONJOLA PROVED WONDERFUL" SAYS GRATEFUL LADY

The Medicine I Always Needed; The Remedy I Should Have Had in the First Place.

MRS. E. A. K'BURG. "The very first bottle of Konjola worked wonders in my case," said Mrs. E. A. K'burg, Monclova, Ohio. "My stomach was in a very poor condition. Even bread and butter caused gas to form. My stomach bloated, and I suffered severe pains. My breath came in gasps. Belching spells also annoyed me, and I steadily lost weight and strength. "Results from the first bottle of Konjola were almost incredible. In two weeks my appetite and digestion was restored. Gas, bloating and belching spells disappeared. My breath comes freely, and I am fast regaining weight and strength. I feel like a different woman. Konjola surely proved to me that it is a wonderful medicine. Konjola is sold in Circleville, Ohio, by Hamilton & Ryan's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

THE SKY LINK BETWEEN THE AMERICAS

Air Transport Promises Closer Union of North and South America With Central American Nations.

PROGRESS needs to "march" no longer. It soars on wings. The establishment by the Pan American Airways of a passenger route joining the two American continents with the nations of Central America has been hailed generally as a step that not only will bring into closer friendship the countries of the Western Hemisphere, but also will mean a greater strengthening of commercial relations. Leaders in aviation anticipate that on routes such as that over which the big Ford air transports will fly in increasing numbers, commercial aviation will demonstrate most quickly its real benefits. Passenger travel between Central America and the Northern cities has been slow, even on the fastest ships. By the ready means of the airplane it is estimated that hundreds of thousands of dollars may be saved in time alone, and

A tri-motored, all metal Ford air transport, the type of airplane used by the Pan American Airways, is shown poised for the take off. that closer contact will mean a new stimulation for business between the various countries through which the Pan American lines will pass.

Ford air transports are being operated by a number of leading business houses and important corporations in the United States, including three of the large oil companies of the country—the Standard Oil of Indiana, the Standard Oil of California, and the Texas Company—which employ the airplane for the quick assembling of officials for meetings and for inspection work of executives over oil properties.

Progress in Design

They are used also by a number of the leading passenger line companies, operating on local lines as well as on long air cruises, and will be employed by the Transcontinental Air Transport for the combination air and rail service between California and New York. The latest Ford transports re-

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. Church will meet at the home of Mrs. N. J. Ford on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. A good attendance is desired.

The Standard Bearers will meet in the M. E. community room on Thursday evening at 8:00 o'clock with the following committee in charge: Misses Gwendolyn and Lidoel Pugh, Virginia Lee Orr, Isabel Strawser, Dorothy Gearhart, and Harmon Enoch and Glenn Ross.

Mrs. Ed. Bright (Carrie Glenn) returned to her home in Columbus Saturday after a week's visit with Mrs. Emma Miller and other friends. Mrs. Bright's father was pastor of the M. E. church at one time a number of years ago.

ORGY OF HOME RUNS FEATURE MAJOR LOOPS

Circuit Clouts Getting To Be Common, Every Day Occurrence.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Home run hitters, as gate attractions, will soon be retailing at a dime a dozen if the present orgy of slugging in the big league continues. Circuit clouts have become so common that they are about as thrilling as taking the wife to a movie.

No less than eighteen homers were hit in yesterday's games, swelling the total of both leagues to 408 for the season to date, as compared to 334 at this time last year. If the major league fence busters stick to this mad pace, a new record total of 1,500 home runs will be set this year. The 1928 output was 1,093.

National league sluggers have contributed 241 of this season's 408 homers. Just a few men are doing the heavy sticking in the American loop. The Yankee home run twins, Gehrig and Ruth, and the Athletic duo of Simmons and Fox have hit more than one-fourth of the entire league total.

Five home runs—two by the Roly-Poly Hack Wilson and one apiece by Hornsby, Grimm and Grace—enabled the cubs to snatch a 10 to 9 brawl from the Giants yesterday, snapping New York's winning streak of five victories and saving Chicago a drop into fourth place. Homers by Terry and Roush of the Giants made it close.

The race tightened a bit, as the Cardinals got no better than an even break with Brooklyn and Pittsburgh walloped the Phillies again, 9 to 5. Bottomley's homer gave the cards a 3 to 1 decision in the opener but Brooklyn annexed the nightcap, 11 to 8, thanks to a pair of homers by Gink Hendrick which drove in five runs. The Cardinals now lead Pittsburgh by only 11 points.

The defeat of the Athletics by Detroit, 8 to 4, made the day a red-letter one for the American league. Philadelphia had won six straight games. Sorrell and Stoner pitcher for the Tigers and Quinn and Orwoll for the A's. Homers by Hellmann and Shea aided Detroit.

The reorganized Yanks have played errorless ball for four consecutive days and their starting pitcher has gone the route in each instance, impressive evidence of reform. Yesterday the erratic Lemmy Johnson had a good day and won a 4 to 2 decision over Red Faber of the White Sox, Chicago getting only four hits. The Yanks swept the four-game series but faced sterner opposition today from Cleveland the only league rival they have not yet beaten this season.

The second-place Browns failed to take advantage of Philadelphia's defeat, losing out in the ninth, 8 to 7, when their pitching staff blew up and Washington scored six runs. Walter Beal, the original "Wild Man" of the Yankees, pitched most of the game for the Nats and received credit for the victory. Bluege stole home with the winning run.

Jimmie Zinn allowed only five hits and Fonseca knocked in all of his team's runs as Cleveland blanked the Red Sox, 4 to 0.

The Braves averted a flop into the National league cellar by winning the last game of the series with Cincinnati, 2 to 1.

COCA COLAS BEAT EVELAND'S NINE

The Coca Cola recreation ball team, with Frank Lynch doing the pitching, defeated Eveland Grocers at the south end commons Tuesday evening, by a score of 8 to 1. The Coca-Colas have been taking the scalp off all their opponents so far and their manager pitcher hasn't lost a game.

Thursday night the first game of the Recreation League will be played at the Ohio Utilities grounds, on W. Mound-st when the Coca-Colas meet the Ohio Utilities team. A good game can be expected.

MAJOR LOOPS

Circuit Clouts Getting To Be Common, Every Day Occurrence.

NEW YORK, June 5.—Home run hitters, as gate attractions, will soon be retailing at a dime a dozen if the present orgy of slugging in the big league continues. Circuit clouts have become so common that they are about as thrilling as making the wife to a movie.

No less than eighteen homers were hit in yesterday's games, swelling the total of both leagues to 408 for the season to date, as compared to 334 at this time last year. If the major league fence busters stick to this mad pace, a new record total of 1,500 home runs will be set this year. The 1928 output was 1,093.

National league sluggers have contributed 241 of this season's 408 homers. Just a few men are doing the heavy sticking in the American loop. The Yankee home run twins, Gehrig and Ruth, and the Athletic duo of Simmons and Fox have hit more than one-fourth of the entire league total.

Five home runs—two by the Roly-Poly Hack Wilson and one apiece by Hornsby, Grimm and Grace—enabled the cubs to snatch a 10 to 9 brawl from the Giants yesterday, snapping New York's winning streak of five victories and saving Chicago a drop into fourth place. Homers by Terry and Roush of the Giants made it close.

The race tightened a bit, as the Cardinals got no better than an even break with Brooklyn and Pittsburgh walloped the Phillies again, 9 to 5. Bottomley's homer gave the cards a 3 to 1 decision in an opener but Brooklyn annexed the nightcap, 11 to 8, thanks to a pair of homers by Gunk Hendrick which drove in five runs. The Cardinals now lead Pittsburgh by only 11 points.

The defeat of the Athletics by Detroit, 8 to 4, made the day a red-letter one for the American league. Philadelphia had won six straight games. Sorrell and Sponer pitcher for the Tigers and Quinn and Orwoll for the A's. Homers by Heimann and Shea aided Detroit.

The reorganized Yanks have played errorless ball for four consecutive days and their starting pitcher has gone the route in each instance, impressive evidence of reform. Yesterday the erratic Henner Johnson had a good day and won a 4 to 2 decision over Red Faber of the White Sox, Chicago getting only four hits. The Yanks swept the four-game series but faced sterner opposition today from Cleveland and the only league rival they have not yet beaten this season.

The second-place Browns failed to take advantage of Philadelphia's defeat, losing out in the ninth, 8 to 7, when their pitching staff blew up and Washington scored six runs. Walter Beal, the original "Wild Man" of the Yankees, pitched most of the game for the Nats and received credit for the victory. Bludge stole home with the winning run.

Jimmie Zinn allowed only five hits and Fonseca knocked in all of his team's runs as Cleveland blanked the Red Sox, 4 to 0. The Braves averted a flop into the National league cellar by winning the last game of the series with Cincinnati, 4 to 1.

COCA COLAS BEAT EVELAND'S NINE

The Coca Cola recreation ball team, with Frank Lynch doing the pitching, defeated Eveland Grocers at the south end commons Tuesday evening, by a score of 8 to 1. The Coca-Colas have been taking the scalp off all their opponents so far and their manager pitcher hasn't lost a game.

Thursday night the first game of the Recreation League will be played at the Ohio Utilities grounds, on W. Mound-st when the Coca-Colas meet the Ohio Utilities team. A good game can be expected.

GRAND JURY MEETS IN EXTRA SESSION

The April grand jury of Pickaway-co was convened in special session at 10 a. m. Wednesday to investigate seven cases involving 10 defendants in order to dispose of them before the summer months. The work will be completed Thursday night, Prosecutor Emmitt L. Crist said.

The members of the grand jury are: Homer Fullen, Charles Noble, Nelson Warner, Seymour Miller, Wallace Bockert, John D. Hummel, W. J. Dearth, Mrs. Olin Dresbach, John H. Dunlap, Marion Trimble, William Cady, W. G. Jacob, Roe Morris, Thomas Stocklen, and Charles Young.

Colonial Smugglers
In colonial New England there were smugglers, men who brought in goods in defiance of the British, robbed his majesty's government of needed revenue and helped materially, in the long run, to detach the American colonies from British rule. Boston, Providence, Newport and Salem all were ports of call for the carriers of contraband—Kokomo Tribune.

SMITH SENTENCED

H. Quimby Smith, former president of the Mt. Sterling National bank, which is now in the hands of a receiver, has been sentenced by Federal Judge R. R. Nevins in the federal court at Dayton, O., to serve a year and a day in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta for misapplying the bank's funds.

Mrs. R. E. Finch and sons, Walter Finch and Mansord Finch of Carmi, Ill., are visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George McDowell of W. Mound-st.

As Predicted A RESOUNDING SUCCESS

THE WORLD'S FIRST STRAIGHT-EIGHT UNDER $1000

In April the public swamped Marmon salesrooms looking at the Roosevelt... In May they bought every one the Marmon factory could build and wanted more... And now in June, even bigger things are happening... There is no competition to Roosevelt value even in sight.

RECREATION BALL LEAGUE IS PLANNED

Recreation baseball is enjoying many followers of baseball and there are a number of teams being organized. There now is talk of a league being formed. Teams already to enter the league are Coca Colas, Evelands Nine, formerly known as Tellings Ice Cream, Pettit Tire shop and Ohio Utilities.

They would like to make a six team league. Any other teams wanting to enter see Bob Maloney or Ohio Utilities. Games will be played at the Ohio Utilities grounds which have just been scraped and is in good shape.

Morgan's Transfers under Management of Charles Scott and Joe Glitt are organizing a team. Any good players wanting tryout see them mentioned "Art" Steele, "Eve" Merriman, "Dick" Robinson, "Boyce" Parks, "Dorcy" Court-right, Take notice.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO HAVE FIELD DAY

Members of the local commandery and chapter of Knights-Templar and their families are invited to attend the field day for District No. 4, comprising Columbus, Circleville, Lancaster, Chillicothe and Logan, at the York Temple country club, a mile north of Worthington, on Saturday, June 15.

There will be baseball, tennis, horseshoes, recreation ball and golf, together with drills, inspections and tactics in the afternoon. At 5 p m there will be a band concert followed by a picnic supper and dancing until 11:30 o'clock.

HELD FOR CHECKS

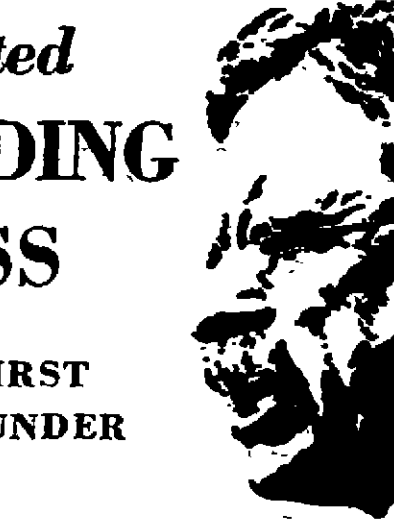

W. S. Beeman, Chillicothe, was arrested there Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff John Ward and Miller Fissell on charges of issued checks without funds. It is said he passed a worthless check to Willis Cave for $30 and to W. J. Ryan for $20. He was to have a hearing before Justice E. C. Fricke Wednesday afternoon.

GOES TO COLUMBUS

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Jenkins and Mrs. Janet Walker of Columbus, attended the graduation exercises Tuesday night, where a brother of Mrs. Walker, Harry Grant, was one of the graduating class. Harry, who will enter Ohio State university in the fall, has accepted a position in an apartment house on E. Broad-st in Columbus for the summer. He will live with his sister, Mrs. Walker while in Columbus.

Standard Time

The United States Naval Observatory has three standard clocks running in constant temperature vaults, electrically wound and sealed to keep the air pressure constant. Meridian circle observations of selected stars are taken regularly on clear nights, and from these observations the errors of standard clocks are determined. The observatory sends out time signals. Correct time is given over radio networks as an advertising device.

SPINAGO THE TONIC THAT CONTAINS SPINACH

"I Would Not Take $50.00 For the Benefits Derived From Spinago."

Said Michael E. Flinn of Chillicothe R. R. No. 1.

"Before starting to take Spinago I doctored for more than nine years, I could hardly get around, my side pained, my stomach and bowels kept me in continual agony, and I had bad case of indigestion."

"But after taking three bottles of Spinago I am the happiest man in the world. I cannot say too much about Spinago. I want everyone who is suffering from pain to know that here is a medicine that will bring them relief."

RARE CAST IS SEEN IN FILM

Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovitch Co-starred In "The Three Passions."

Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovitch are co-stars in Rex Ingram's first United Artists Picture, which opens at the Cliftona on Wednesday. It is the third picture in which they have played under Ingram's direction.

Founded on the novel by Cosmo Hamilton, "The Three Passions" is the first enterprise of the new British company, St. George's Productions, Ltd., of which Capt. Alastair Mackintosh is the managing director. St. George's is thought to have made a sensational start in production by capturing Ingram when so many were anxious to have his first story of British life.

Money, religion, Love are "The Three Passions" which, clashing in the surroundings of modern London, as they have through the ages, provide Rex Ingram with the motif for this latest film.

Shayle Gardner, well known on the British stage and screen; Eames, famous as a Shakespearean actress, and who has played Queen Elizabeth on the screen; Andrews Engleman, the Russian actor who made a name in "Mare Nostrum," and Leslie Faber, well known in both London and New York theaters, are leading members of the strong cast of "The Three Passions."

"THE COLLEGE HERO"

Pauline Garon, Robert Agnew and Ben Turpin are starred at the Grand theater tonight in "The College Hero," a battle of human emotions. He tried to ruin his friend and defeat his school but learned that friendship surmounts revenge. Educational Comedy and Fox News also will be shown.

"KONJOLA PROVED WONDERFUL" SAYS GRATEFUL LADY

The Medicine I Always Needed; The Remedy I Should Have Had in the First Place.

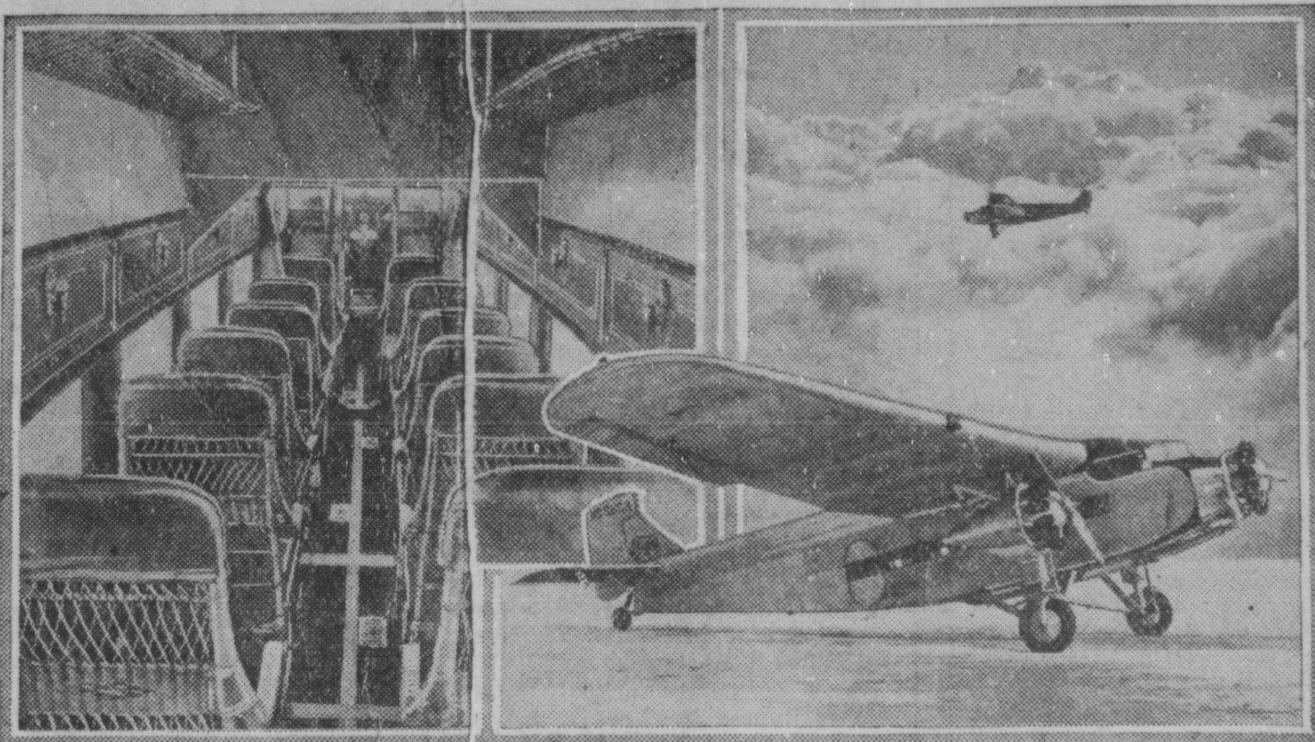

MRS. E. A. K'BURG.

"The very first bottle of Konjola worked wonders in my case," said Mrs. E. A. K'burg, Monclova, Ohio. "My stomach was in a very poor condition. Even bread and butter caused gas to form. My stomach bloated, and I suffered severe pains. My breath came in gasps. Belching spells also annoyed me, and I steadily lost weight and strength."

"Results from the first bottle of Konjola were almost incredible. In two weeks my appetite and digestion was restored. Gas, bloating and belching spells disappeared. My breath comes freely, and I am fast regaining weight and strength. I feel like a different woman. Konjola surely proved to me that it is a wonderful medicine."

Konjola is sold in Circleville, Ohio, by Hamilton & Ryan's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

THE SKY LINK BETWEEN THE AMERICAS

Air Transport Promises Closer Union of North and South America With Central American Nations.

PROGRESS needs to "march" no longer. It soars on wings. The establishment by the Pan American Airways of a passenger route joining the two American continents with the nations of Central America has been hailed generally as a step that not only will bring into closer friendship the countries of the Western Hemisphere, but also will mean a greater strengthening of commercial relations.

Leaders in aviation anticipate that on routes such as that over which the big Ford air transports will fly in increasing numbers, commercial aviation will demonstrate most quickly its real benefits.

Passenger travel between Central America and the Northern cities has been slow, even on the fastest ships. By the ready means of the airplane it is estimated that hundreds of thousands of dollars may be saved in time alone, and that closer contact will mean a new stimulation for business between the various countries through which the Pan American lines will pass.

Ford air transports are being operated by a number of leading business houses and important corporations in the United States, including three of the large oil companies of the country—the Standard Oil of Indiana, the Standard Oil of California, and the Texas Company—which employ the airplane for the quick assembling of officials for meetings and for inspection work of executives over oil properties.

Progress in Design

They are used also by a number of the leading passenger line companies, operating on local lines as well as on long air cruises, and will be employed by the Transcontinental Air Transport for the combination air and rail service between California and New York.

The latest Ford transports reflect the recent progress made in designing of airplane interiors in anticipation of the more general use of the air for passenger travel.

The Ford Company has recognized that the patrons of the air lines now being established will spend a good many hours in the cabins of the transports and consequently will desire an interior of pleasing tone, free from harshness. For the new Ford planes colors have been chosen because of their restfulness and depth. The cabin ceiling in all of the new planes is of cream, giving a cheerfulness and brightness to the passenger compartment.

The cabin walls of the new Ford transports are of a new plywood, developed on specifications of the Ford Motor Company. It is two thicknesses of aluminum with a core of balsa, the latter being a tropical wood much lighter than cork but of much greater strength. The balsa core acts as an insulation against the noise of the three motors.

TOWNSHIP ROADS UP TO TRUSTEES

COLUMBUS, O., June 5.—Power to determine the nature of the highway improvement and to select the portion of the county road system to be improved, through expenditure of the township's share of the proceeds allotted to the townships from the state gasoline tax fund, is vested in the township trustees. This ruling was given by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman.
Bettman held, however, that the township trustees may relinquish this power to the county commissioners, if they so desire.
Bettman, also, ruled that it is the duty of the county commissioners to maintain and keep in repair bridges and culverts on township roads. Township trustees, however, are authorized to spend money for such maintenance and repair or cooperate with the county commissioners in such work.

MOTHER'S PROMPT AID KEEPS INFANT HAPPY

Knowing Whether Baby Cries from Pain, Temper or Because He Is Ill. Is of Inestimable Value in Keeping Him Comfortable and Well

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

YOU must not look upon a baby's crying as a matter of no significance. A young baby has not yet learned the awful things it will indulge in later. In infancy the child reacts naturally and normally to the trained observer. Every one of its performances has some definite meaning.

DR. COPELAND

The loving and alert mother can learn a lot from the cry of her baby. The cry tells her what is wrong and, in most instances, what should be done to remove the cause of trouble.

The cry of a healthy child is full and clear. It is not muffled or subdued. It is not a wail or a moan. It is an honest-to-goodness yell.

There is nothing modest or retiring about a normal infant. When it is displeased or in pain, it does not hesitate to vocalize its protest.

When you and I weep, great tears roll down our cheeks and splash on the floor. When a young infant cries there are no tears. Not until it is three or four months old do real tears appear. The eyes may appear moist, but there is no flow of water.

When the child grows older the tears are observed. When the age of three or four months is reached their absence is worthy an explanation. After they once begin to flow, if the child is sick and the tears disappear, it is a sign of serious illness. You may be reassured and confident that recovery is on the way when they reappear.

In certain diseases the child may be very sick and yet cry but little. For instance, in pneumonia or bronchitis, in any disease where the free passage of air to the lungs is interfered with, there may be little crying, even if there is a good deal of pain. The baby cannot stop breathing long enough to cry—it requires all the remaining air space to set oxygen into the lungs. Instinctively the infant refrains from crying.

In conditions where there is great loss of physical strength, in all the debilitating diseases, there may be no crying rather than weeping. The child is too weak to cry.

The cry of a baby may be annoying at times, but it has a real significance always. The mother must learn just what it means. Then she has done this she will be able to make the baby comfortable and happy—and the baby never is comfortable and happy when it is crying.

tion at present, emphasizing perhaps too strongly the quantitative of the minds referring to the "nut tests" by which students are graded, in this highly specialized and scientific age. He did not care to give the impression that he was deriding these policies, but meant to convey the fact that quality of mind was as much to be commended as the quantity. By qualities he mentioned faith, truth, honesty, industry, purity and thrift. He named these as most gratifying in students, in the elements of instruction and process, and that after all, these were the real quantitative tests of personal character.

VIRTUE OF COURTESY

He dwelt for some moments on the virtue of courtesy in all of life saying that at times it seemed almost a lost art. Of reverence he spoke, as a personal regard to others than one's self as well as to God. He mentioned the love of beautiful things—art, nature and music—and the present use of these in school today, in the manner in which they play an important part in creating the proper surroundings, conducive to education.

who presented the class to the board of education as is the custom, introduced the three pupils of the class who had made the three highest averages, 90 or above for the four high school years, and presented their certificates of merit. There three pupils were Irma Rader, Kenneth Ulm and Arthur K. Johnson. Charles H. May, president of the board of education, then called by name each member of the class, who stood up one by one until the class in its entirety stood, together to sing their class song for the last time together. The words to this song were written by Alice Roof. Then each member walked across the stage to accept the diploma from Mr. May, who has been a member of the board for 12 years, and who remembered the graduates when they had entered the Circleville public schools in the first grade. BIBLE THOUGHT

THE SECOND TEST — Thou the devil saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down; for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not Lord thy God. —Matthew 4:6, 7.

PRAYER — "The desert Thy temptations knows, Thy conflict Thy victory too."

BIGGEST BUSINESS

When we think of great enterprise it is in terms of oil, steel, automobiles or perhaps the railroads, and we call to mind the hundreds of millions of dollars that are invested in these gigantic undertakings. When we dwell on big business, we vision great buildings, tall chimneys tufted with smoke, or huge furnaces that reach out with white steel fingers or a forest of oil derricks, with long lines of waiting tank cars.

Yet banking is the nation's biggest business. Banking capital employed in the United States exceeds that employed in the largest industries.

Americans like to discuss achievement in terms of growth. Here again banking figures are impressive. Many banking institutions have enjoyed a phenomenal growth in recent years, and recent banking mergers dwarf the greatest industrial consolidations.

Within the last decade banking has forged to the forefront among the great commercial forces of the world. No longer content with being places of deposit and discount, the banks of the nation have marched shoulder to shoulder with its industrial development. Banking is no longer a part-time occupation suitable for the afternoon's attention of the town's wealthiest man. It is a specialized profession, calling upon the best brains in the community and offering large rewards to those who are particularly adapted to it. Supplying the credit needs of modern commerce has become a tremendous undertaking.

DEADLY MOSQUITO

The tiny mosquito often seems more of a pest than a formidable antagonist, but in open contest with man she (only the female bites) has won more victories than have been scored by the large beasts of the jungle or deadly reptiles. This little insect has rendered fertile and desirable lands uninhabitable, impeded the march of progress and infected millions with fatal malaria germ. In the tropics every engineering project depends largely upon the success of preliminary mosquito-extermination campaigns.

In a number of badly infested sections of the United States the Government has got down to business and waged campaigns against mosquitoes with the same vigor as against armed invaders. During the mosquito breeding season—the rainy season—a little army, which includes sanitary engineers, laboratory experts, truck drivers and laborers, is busy spraying ponds, searching for pools and every sort of receptacle in which mosquitoes may hatch. They go out with trucks equipped with machine-driven pumps to spread oil on the mosquito-troubled waters. The balance of the year is spent in drainage work.

Every community or section is troubled with this vicious and annoying insect, but only because of its own carelessness and neglect. If every property owner would destroy the breeding places—not an impossible task—the extermination would soon be complete. Few do, so all must screen in their porches or devote their evenings there to swatting and scratching.

SUMMER CARE OF THE SHEEP FLOCK

Blowfly Is One of Most Persistent Trouble Makers.

With the coming of warm, pleasant weather we also have certain pests to combat and the blowfly is one of the most persistent trouble makers in the good old summer time, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer. As a preventive use some good healing remedy on the sheep cuts. Sheep dip is good, add a little pine tar to keep flies away. In docking the late lambs one must observe them closely for blowflies. The wool should be kept clean and clipped closely from the rear end of the sheep during fly time.

Should you find maggots developed on the sheep some gasoline poured on the spot will root them quick and not cause the wool to fall out. Sheep dip is also good but if you get too strong a mixture the wool will slip and the skin be blistered. Follow up the treatment with a little pine tar to avoid a second attack. Once the blowfly gets in his work the same sheep seems to be more susceptible to his ravages. Just a stain on the wool will often be the source of infection if not taken care of promptly. We always keep some tar mixed with a little sweet oil, a can of the best sheep dip and some gasoline handy in hot weather. Gasoline will give instant relief from maggots and cause no harm, but it evaporates very quickly and must be followed up with some other remedy that is a fly repellent. One needs to see his flock pretty often in warm weather to avoid losses from the causes mentioned above.

Should you notice a sheep limping see if there is any eaked mud between the toes, or possibly you may find a hedge thorn. We have some orange orange hedge on the farm and quite often thorns give trouble. Also you will find a little gland opening between the toes, this sometimes becomes closed and always causes lameness. When it does squeeze the contents of the opening out and the trouble disappears.

Live Stock Farming Is

Sure to Pay Dividends

Diversified stock farming is conducive to regular dividends and better methods of operation, which include machine methods and proper labor distribution as well as remuneration. There is no doubt as to the frequent lack of working capital among farmers, but Short-coming is provided by the nucleus of a live stock farming system that will attract assistance from financial circles at reasonable rates until they can accumulate surpluses from their earnings adequate to meet their normal requirements. Much of the labor in stock farming is provided by the animals themselves in that they gather the crop by grazing and fertilize the soil, thereby eliminating two handling charges.

Manicuring Cattle to Save Much Discomfort

Cattle kept in the stable or in yards often suffer discomfort because of excessive growth of the claws. This is due to lack of wear, writes Dr. J. Van Es, in Kansas Farmer. Excessively long claws lead to a faulty position of the limbs, strains of tendons and pain during motion. This discomfort and pain may reduce the milk yield. Heavy bred bulls are particularly apt to suffer, and their usefulness may become impaired. They should have their claws properly trimmed about twice a year. With appropriate tools the excessive horn may be removed and the whole smoothed with a rasp. It may be necessary to throw the animal but this should not keep the job from being done.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Watch the horses' and mules' shoulders.

Exercise pregnant ewes as much as possible.

Disinfect old hog houses with crude oil to keep down lice.

Sows and litters should be protected against cold and rains.

Alfalfa and clover pastures are good to keep a pig's appetite keen.

Plenty of milk and good pasture makes lambs fat, tender and juicy.

Lambs on grass, and calves on clover, are making a lot of old farms over.

There are advantages in having early spring pigs if we take good care of them.

Pounds of lamb produced per ewe is the best test of the ability of a market lamb producer.

Sheep may be fed raw potatoes nearly as well as cattle and can usually be fed about two and a half pounds of potatoes per head.

About two pounds of cooked potatoes with grain and hay constitute a satisfactory allowance for sheep. Sliced, raw potatoes may be fed if they are free from disease and dirt.

The farmer who keeps 50 brood sows and averages four pigs to the litter can hardly compete with the farmer who keeps 25 sows and averages eight pigs to the litter, 200 pigs being produced in each case.

ANOTHER FARM PROBLEM

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

TO escape the nagging of a stepmother and the selfishness of her stepister, Daphne Haines, seventeen and beautiful, leaves home determined to make her own living. She has a difficult time in San Francisco and nearly starves until she encounters Ralph McKevitt, family friend, wealthy and handsome, whom her half-sister, Crystal, has decided to marry for luxury and comfort, rather than love. Ralph soon wins Daphne's affection, and she is exquisitely happy until Crystal appears. Crystal uses McKevitt as a "good thing," but spends much time with a debonaire Bohemian, Avery Woodward, who promises to teach her much of life and love and art. Unhappy because Ralph obviously neglects her now, Daphne moons and dreams until she reduces her efficiency to a point where she loses her position. Ill with humility and fright, she sits in the park. Suddenly she discovers Ralph driving along in a smart roadster. She hails him. He seems enthusiastic over their meeting, and she feels reassured that he still cares for her. She tells him her troubles and he promises to find her a position. Meanwhile Crystal is making more demands on Ralph's time and purse. He is annoyed, but he reasons, Crystal is a helpless type of girl, and he must stand by her. Daphne becomes secretary to a prominent elderly lawyer, who takes a fatherly interest in her. She is overjoyed when he invites her and Ralph to his home. Ralph sends Allan Winters, a friend, in his place. During the journey Allan's attempt at sociability is wasted, for the girl at his side seems unconscious of his presence. Her mind is filled with thoughts of Ralph, whom she adores. The visit is pleasant and Allan Winters proves to be a delightful companion. They play together on the beach like a couple of carefree children.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.
It was a dream day to Daphne. A day that she afterward remembered only vaguely and disjointedly.

Mr. Greeley clumping down to the gate with them, helping Daphne into the car with a gallant flourish. "Drive over the grade, Allan, the high road to San Rafael . . . sure it's longer, lad . . . this is a night for long roads, with a good car and a pretty girl, and the full moon . . . hmm? Hah! I'm telling you—"

And then the long, beautiful drive over the hills, while the orange moon hung like a lantern in the black, star-powdered sky. Silence . . . breathless . . . throbbing silence . . . Why didn't Allan talk? Why was he so still? Finally she let herself speak of Ralph, and after that the words came rapidly and naturally. She talked on and on. An hour—two hours, perhaps. Time passes quickly when you talk of the one you love.

Allan didn't say much. But she knew he was a sympathetic listener. Wasn't he Ralph's best friend? Things she had never told anyone before. Things she had hardly acknowledged to herself. Her tongue was flying away with her in the darkness, the intimacy of it—they two alone in the woods. "People don't believe in love at first sight any more, I guess . . . It sounds kind of silly to say it, but I loved him the first time I ever saw him, the football field when I was only a kid. . . . And then it was just as though fate brought us together, his coming to see my stepister, and finding me. . . . Do you know what he said, Allan? He said, 'Why, you're beautiful'—and he must have loved me right then—to think that . . . did you say something, Allan?"

"No—but you are, you know—"

"Are what?"

"Beautiful." Her delighted laughter rippled. "Oh, heavens, no—I'm much too little and black and white . . . it was because he . . . he liked me . . . that he thought I was . . . don't you see?"

"But I think you are beautiful, Daphne."

What was that queer throbbing note in his voice? It frightened her. She shook herself restlessly. She was nervous, imagining things. He was teasing her, and—

She made some laughing answer, and soon she was back to Ralph again. Can you imagine being in love for years with somebody you've never really seen? It sounds foolish . . . I can't explain it exactly . . . He was always so far away on the football field you know, and all the newspaper pictures were different, and then that day that I did meet him face to face I was crying so hard he was all blurred, and—"

They were home before she had half finished her story.

"Home already! Oh, Allan—so soon?—And it's been such a wonderful day. We'll have some more days, all of us together. A four-some, you know, wouldn't you like it, Allan—with Ralph too?"

She looked up into his face eagerly, waiting for his answer. She did so want him to meet Miss Yardley.

"Why, you're terribly tired!" she cried, shocked by the haggard face the street light showed her. He had the look of one who has suffered cruelly for hours, the glazed eyes, the pinched, pale look about the mouth and nose. All Daphne's tender heart turned to water. "I'm so sorry . . . to think of you driving all that way, and me chattering on and on. Is it a headache, Allan? You aren't sick?"

He smiled at her solicitude. "You're sweet, Daphne, but it isn't anything . . . anything you can help . . ."

Flora McCordie limped into Mrs. Hinckle's kitchen with new shoes on her feet, new gloves on her hands, and a delicious, custard-filled coffee cake, only a little crushed, in a pasteboard box in her arms.

"Get together girls, we're going to celebrate! Flory's got her first pay check, Glory be to God . . . Have you got enough coffee for a party, Mama Hinckle? We girls are going to have a treat, yep, a treat on the Herald's new society editor, meaning Flory. A whole week and not fired yet! Will you look at the nuts on that cake? Yum! You cut it, Daphne, and maybe Viola can find enough cups for the gang. I've got to take these damn shoes off, I've gone and got 'em too small again—"

"It must be wonderful to work on a newspaper!" Viola gushed, thinking of murder and sudden death, and ambulances, and poisoned candy.

"Maybe," Flora sighed, "but not society. The beautiful debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oskosh McKimble—oh, blah—"

Say, Daphne, I've been hearing a lot about that, flame of yours, though—"

Daphne blanched and then turned scarlet, as she always did when Ralph's name was mentioned. "You mean—Ralph McKevitt?"

Flora grinned good naturedly. "Yes, but nothing to worry about, baby. Just society items. He was one of the leading lights at the Arts ball Saturday night, his picture was in the paper, didn't you see it?"

Daphne shook her head. Saturday night . . . at a ball. That was why he didn't call her. That was why he didn't come on Sunday!

Flora reached over and patted Daphne's shoulder. "Oh, come on, kid—don't look so tragic! I wouldn't have told you if I thought you'd care. What did he do, tell you a little white lie?"

Daphne couldn't answer, she cried, shocked by the haggard face the street light showed her. He had the look of one who has suffered cruelly for hours, the glazed eyes, the pinched, pale look about the mouth and nose. Flora grinned good naturedly. "Yes, but nothing to worry about, baby. Just society items. He was one of the leading lights at the Arts ball Saturday night, his picture was in the paper, didn't you see it?"

Daphne shook her head. Saturday night . . . at a ball. That was why he didn't call her. That was why he didn't come on Sunday!

Flora reached over and patted Daphne's shoulder. "Oh, come on, kid—don't look so tragic! I wouldn't have told you if I thought you'd care. What did he do, tell you a little white lie?"

Daphne couldn't answer, she

SUMMER CARE OF THE SHEEP FLOCK

Blowfly Is One of Most Persistent Trouble Makers.

With the coming of warm, pleasant weather we also have certain pests to combat and the blowfly is one of the most persistent trouble makers in the good old summer time, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer. As a preventive use some good healing remedy on the sheep cuts. Sheep dip is good, and a little pine tar to keep flies away. In docking the late lambs one must observe them closely for blowflies. The wool should be kept clean and clipped closely from the rear end of the sheep during fly time.

Should you find maggots developed on the sheep some gasoline poured on the spot will rout them quickly and not cause the wool to fall out. Sheep dip is also good but if you get too strong a mixture the wool will slip and the skin be blistered. Follow up the treatment with a little pine tar to avoid a second attack. Once the blowfly gets in his work the same sheep seems to be more susceptible to his ravages. Just a stain on the wool will often be the source of infection if not taken care of promptly. We always keep some tar mixed with a little sweet oil, a can of the best sheep dip and some gasoline handy in hot weather. Gasoline will give instant relief from maggots and cause no harm, but it evaporates very quickly and must be followed up with some other remedy that is a fly repellent. One needs to see his flock pretty often in warm weather to avoid losses from the causes mentioned above.

Should you notice a sheep limping see if there is any exudate between the toes, or possibly you may find a hedgehog. We have some cases of hedgehog on the farm and quite often thorns give trouble. Also you will find a little gland opening between the toes, this sometimes becomes closed and always causes lameness. When it does squeeze the contents of the opening out and the trouble disappears.

Live Stock Farming Is Sure to Pay Dividends

Diversified stock farming is conducive to regular dividends and better methods of operation, which include machine methods and proper labor distribution as well as remuneration. There is no doubt as to the frequent lack of working capital among farmers, but Short-horns can be used by many as a nucleus of a live stock farming system that will attract assistance from financial circles at reasonable rates and they can accumulate surpluses from their earnings adequate to meet their normal requirements. Much of the labor in stock farming is provided by the animals themselves in that they gather the crop by grazing and fertilize the soil, thereby eliminating two handling charges.

Manicuring Cattle to Save Much Discomfort

Cattle kept in the stable or in yards often suffer discomfort because of excessive growth of the claws. This is due to lack of wear, writes Dr. L. Van Es, in Kansas Farmer. Excessively long claws lead to a faulty position of the limbs, strains of tendons and pain during motion. This discomfort and pain may reduce the milk yield. Heavy bred bulls are particularly apt to suffer, and their usefulness may become impaired. They should have their claws properly trimmed about twice a year. With appropriate tools the excessive horn may be removed and the whole smoothed with a rasp. It may be necessary to throw the animal but this should not keep the job from being done.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Watch the horses' and mules' shoulders.

Exercise pregnant ewes as much as possible.

Disinfect old hog houses with crude oil to keep down lice.

Sows and litters should be protected against cold and rains.

Alfalfa and clover pastures are good to keep a pig's appetite keen.

Plenty of milk and good pasture makes lambs fat, tender and juicy.

Lambs on grass, and calves on clover, are making a lot of old farms over.

There are advantages in having early spring pigs if we take good care of them.

Pounds of lamb produced per ewe is the best test of the ability of a market lamb producer.

Sheep may be fed raw potatoes nearly as well as cattle and can usually be fed about two and a half pounds of potatoes per head.

About two pounds of cooked potatoes with grain and hay constitute a satisfactory allowance for sheep. Starch potatoes may be fed if they are free from disease and dirt.

The farmer who keeps 50 brood sows and averages four pigs to the litter can hardly compete with the farmer who keeps 25 sows and averages eight pigs to the litter. 200 pigs being produced in each case.

ANOTHER FARM PROBLEM

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

To escape the nagging of a stepmother and the selfishness of her stepister, Daphne Haines, seventeen and beautiful, leaves home determined to make her own living. She has a difficult time in San Francisco and nearly starves until she encounters Ralph McKevitt, family friend, wealthy and handsome, whom her half-sister, Crystal, has decided to marry for luxury and comfort, rather than love. Ralph soon wins Daphne's affection, and she is exquisitely happy until Crystal appears. Crystal uses McKevitt as a "good thing," but spends much time with a debonaire Bohemian, Avery Woodard, who promises to teach her much of life and love and art. Unhappy because Ralph obviously neglects her now Daphne moons and dreams until she reduces her efficiency to a point where she loses her position. All with humility and fright, she sits in the park. Suddenly she discovers Ralph driving along in a smart roadster. She hails him. He seems enthusiastic over their meeting, and she feels reassured that he still cares for her. She tells him her troubles and he promises to find her a position. Meanwhile Crystal is making more demands on Ralph's time and purse. He is annoyed, but he reasons, Crystal is a helpless type of girl, and he must stand by her. Daphne becomes secretary to a prominent elderly lawyer, who takes a fatherly interest in her. She is overjoyed when he invites her and Ralph to his home. Ralph sends Allan Winters, a friend, in his place. During the journey Allan's attempt at sociability is wasted, for the girl at his side seems unconscious of his presence. Her mind is filled with thoughts of Ralph, whom she adores. The visit is pleasant and Allan Winters proves to be a delightful companion. They play together on the beach like a couple of carefree children.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV. It was a dream day to Daphne. A day that she afterward remembered only vaguely and disjointedly.

Mr. Greely clumping down to the gate with them, helping Daphne into the car with a gallant flourish. "Drive over the grade, Allan, the high road to San Rafael . . . sure it's longer, lad . . . this is a night for long roads, with a good car and a pretty girl, and the full moon . . . hah! I'm telling you."

And then the long, beautiful drive over the hills, while the orange moon hung like a lantern in the black, star-powdered sky. Silence . . . breathless . . . throbbing silence . . . Why didn't Allan talk? Why was he so still? Finally she let herself speak of Ralph, and after that the words came rapidly and naturally. She talked on and on. An hour—two hours, perhaps. Time passes quickly when you talk of the one you love.

Allan didn't say much. But she knew he was a sympathetic listener. Wasn't he Ralph's best friend? Things she had never told anyone before. Things she had hardly acknowledged to herself. Her tongue was flying away with her in the darkness, the intimacy of it—they two alone in the woods. "People don't believe in love at first sight any more, I guess. It sounds kind of silly to say it, but I loved him the first time I ever saw him, on the football field when I was only a kid. . . . And then it was just as though fate brought us together, his coming to see my stepister, and finding me. Do you know what he said, Allan? He said, 'Why, you're beautiful!' And he must have loved me right then—to think that he did you say something, Allan?"

"No—but you are, you know—'beautiful'."

"Me?" Her delighted laughter rippled. "Oh, heavens, no—I'm much too little and black and white . . . it was because he . . . he liked me . . . that he thought I was . . . don't you see?"

"But I think you are beautiful, Daphne."

What was that queer throbbing noise in his voice? It frightened her. She shook herself restlessly. She was nervous, imagining things. He was teasing her.

She made some laughing answer, and soon she was back to Ralph again. Can you imagine being in love for years with somebody you've never really seen? It sounds foolish. . . . I can't explain it exactly. . . . He was always so far away on the football field you know, and all the newspaper pictures were different, and then that day that I did meet him face to face I was crying so hard he was all blurred, and—

They were home before she had half finished her story. "Home already! Oh, Allan—so soon?—And it's been such a wonderful day. We'll have some more days, all of us together. A four—some, you know, wouldn't you like it, Allan—with Ralph too?"

these damn shoes off, I've gone and got 'em too small again—"

"It must be wonderful to work on a newspaper!" Viola gushed, thinking of murder and sudden death, and ambulances, and poisoned candy.

"Maybe," Flora sighed, "but not society." The beautiful debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oshkosh McKimble—oh, blah—Say, Daphne, I've been hearing a lot about that flame of yours, though—

Daphne blanched and then turned scarlet, as she always did when Ralph's name was mentioned. "You mean—Ralph McKevitt?"

Flora grinned good naturedly. "Yes, but nothing to worry about, baby. Just society items. He was one of the leading lights at the Arts ball Saturday night; his picture was in the paper, didn't you see it?"

Daphne shook her head. Saturday night . . . at a ball. That was why he didn't call her, that was why he didn't come on Sunday—

Flora reached over and patted Daphne's shoulder. "Oh, come on, kid—don't look so tragic! I wouldn't have told you if I thought you'd care. What did he do, tell you a little white lie?"

cried, shocked by the haggard face the street light showed her. He had the look of one who has suffered cruelly for hours. He glanced at her, the pinched, pale look about the mouth and nose. All Daphne's tender heart turned to water. "I'm so sorry . . . to think of you driving all that way, and me chattering on and on. Is it a headache, Allan? You aren't sick?"

He smiled at her solicitously. "You're sweet, Daphne, but it isn't anything . . . anything you can help . . ."

Flora McCordle limped into Mrs. Hinkle's kitchen with new shoes on her feet, new gloves on her hands, and a luscious, custard-filled coffee cake, only a little crushed, in a pasteboard box in her arms. "Get together girls, we're going to celebrate! Flory's got her first pay check, Glory be to God."

Have you got enough coffee for a party, Mrs. Hinkle? Let's girls are going to have a treat, yep, a treat on the Herald's new society editor, meaning Flory. A whole week and not fired yet! Will you look at the nuts on that cake? Yum! You cut it, Daphne, and maybe Viola can find enough cups for the gang. I've got to take

Vegetable Salt

Necessary and desired as salt is, it is forbidden those suffering from high blood pressure. Bright's disease and dropsy. Victims can forego the ingestion of salt. But its taste they crave. Chemists and pharmacists have long sought to compound a substance that tastes like salt but is harmless in these diseases.

Dr. John Christian Krantz, Jr., chemist and pharmacist at Johns Hopkins, announces that that laboratory of minor a benedict drug has created a salt substitute, which has proved palatable during a year's test. It is called eka salt, and is made from malic acid, apple juice.—Time.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE SECOND TEST — Thou the devil saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down; for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee; and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not Lord thy God.—Matthew 4:6, 7.

PRAYER — "The desert Thy temptations knows, Thy conflict Thy victory too."

BIGGEST BUSINESS

When we think of great enterprise it is in terms of oil, steel, automobiles or perhaps the railroads; and we call to mind the hundreds of millions of dollars that are invested in these gigantic undertakings. When we dwell on big business, we vision great buildings, tall chimneys tufted with smoke, or huge furnaces that reach out with white steel fingers or a forest of oil derricks, with long lines of waiting tank cars.

Yet banking is the nation's biggest business. Banking capital employed in the United States exceeds that employed in the largest industries.

Americans like to discuss achievement in terms of growth. Here again banking figures are impressive. Many banking institutions have enjoyed a phenomenal growth in recent years, and recent banking mergers dwarf the greatest industrial consolidations. Within the last decade banking has forged to the forefront among the great commercial forces of the world. No longer content with being places of deposit and discount, the banks of the nation have stepped shoulder to shoulder with the industrial development. Banking is no longer a part-time occupation suitable for the afternoon's attention of the town's wealthiest man. It is a specialized profession, calling upon the best brains in the community and offering large rewards to those who are particularly adapted to it. Supplying the credit needs of modern commerce has become a tremendous undertaking.

DEADLY MOSQUITO

The tiny mosquito often seems more of a pest than a formidable antagonist, but in open contest with man she (only the female bites) has won more victories than have been scored by the large beasts of the jungle or deadly reptiles. This little insect has rendered fertile and desirable lands uninhabitable, impeded the march of progress and infected millions with fatal malaria germ. In the tropics every engineering project depends largely upon the success of preliminary mosquito-extermination campaigns.

In a number of badly infested sections of the United States the Government has got down to business and waged campaigns against mosquitoes with the same vigor as against armed invaders. During the mosquito breeding season—the rainy season—a little army, which includes sanitary engineers, laboratory experts, truck drivers and laborers, is busy spraying ponds, searching for pools and every sort of receptacle in which mosquitoes may hatch. They go out with trucks equipped with machine-driven pumps to spread oil on the mosquito-troubled waters. The balance of the year is spent in drainage work.

Every community or section is troubled with this vicious and annoying insect, but only because of its own carelessness and neglect. If every property owner would destroy the breeding places—not an impossible task—the extermination would soon be complete. Few do, so all must screen in their porches or devote their evenings there to swatting and scratching.

Not Much of a Mountain Ben-Nevis in Scotland, although only 4,000 feet high, is the highest mountain in the British Isles.

M., the following described real estate situated in the County of Pickaway and State of Ohio, and in the City of Circleville to-wit:

Being in the City of Circleville, Ohio, and being Lot Number Eleven Hundred and Sixty Two (1162) in W. V. Brice Section addition to said City of Circleville, as numbered on the Revised plat of said city, located on the East Franklin street, East of Mingo Street, House No. 521.

Said Premises Appraised at $1800. Terms of Sale: CASH.

FRANK DAVIS, Sheriff, Pickaway County, Ohio. C. A. LEIST, Attorney. 51-5t.

NOTICE

William Smith, whose residence is unknown, is hereby notified that Bessie Smith has filed her petition against him for divorce and the custody of children, in case No. 10,617 of the probate court of Pickaway County, Ohio, and that said cause will be for hearing on or after the 22nd day of June, 1929. Dated this 8th day of May, 1929. Abernethy & Simkins, Attorneys for Plaintiff. 39-6t.

TOWNSHIP ROADS UP TO TRUSTEES

COLUMBUS, O., June 5—Power to determine the nature of the highway improvement and to select the portion of the county road system to be improved through expenditure of the township's share of the proceeds allotted to the townships from the state gasoline tax fund, is vested in the township trustees. This ruling was given by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman.

Bettman held, however, that the township trustees may relinquish this power to the county commissioners, if they so desire.

Bettman, also, ruled that it is the duty of the county commissioners to maintain and keep in repair bridges and culverts on township roads. Township trustees, however, are authorized to spend money for such maintenance and repair or cooperate with the county commissioners in such work.

MOTHER'S PROMPT AID KEEPS INFANT HAPPY

Knowing Whether Baby Cries from Pain, Temper or Because He Is Ill, Is of Inestimable Value in Keeping Him Comfortable and Well

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

YOU must not look upon a baby's crying as a matter of no significance. A young baby has not yet learned the artful things it will indulge in later. In infancy the child reacts naturally and normally to the trained observer. Every one of its performances has some definite meaning.

The loving and alert mother can learn a lot from the cry of her baby. The cry tells her what is wrong and, in most instances, what should be done to remove the cause of trouble.

The cry of a healthy child is full and clear. It is not muffled or subdued. It is not a wail or a moan. It is an honest-to-goodness yell. There is nothing modest or retiring about a normal infant. When it is displeased or in pain, it does not hesitate to vocalize its protest.

When you and I weep, great tears roll down our cheeks and splash on the floor. When a young infant cries there are no tears. Not until it is three or four months old do real tears appear. The eyes may appear moist, but there is no flow of water.

When the child grows older the tears are observed. When the age of three or four months is reached their absence is worthy an explanation. After they once begin to flow, if the child is sick and the tears disappear, it is a sign of serious illness. You may be reassured and confident that recovery is on the way when they reappear.

In certain diseases the child may be very sick and yet cry but little. For instance, in pneumonia or bronchitis, in any disease where the free passage of air to the lungs is interfered with, there may be little crying even if there is a good deal of pain. The baby cannot stop breathing long enough to cry—it requires all the remaining air space to get oxygen into the lungs. Instinctively the infant refrains from crying.

In conditions where there is great loss of physical strength, in all the debilitating diseases, there may be no moaning, rather than weeping. The child is too weak to cry.

The cry of a baby may be annoying at times, but it has a real significance always. The mother must learn just what it means. Then she has done this she will be able to make the baby comfortable and happy—and the baby never is comfortable and happy when it is crying.

tion at present, emphasizing perhaps too strongly the quantitative of the minds referring to the "nut tests" by which students are graded, in this highly specialized and scientific age. He did not care to give the impression that he was deriding these policies, but meant to convey the fact that quality of mind was as much to be commended as the quantity. By qualities he mentioned faith, truth, honesty, industry, purity and thrift. He named these as most gratifying in students, in the elements of instruction and process, and that after all, these were the real quantitative tests of personal character.

VIRTUE OF COURTESY

He dwelt for some moments on the virtue of courtesy in all of life saying that at times it seemed almost a lost art. Of reverence he spoke, as a personal regard to others than one's self as well as to God. He mentioned the love of beautiful things—art, nature and music—and the present use of these in school today, in the manner in which they play an important part in creating the proper surroundings, conducive to education.

In conclusion, and among other thoughts he suggested unselfishness was most important in this world of modern inventions and what he termed international mindedness.

His speech was filled with wisdom, easily understandable to the students, who listened intently to every word.

who presented the class to the board of education as is the custom, introduced the three pupils of the class who had made the three highest averages, 90 or above for the four high school years, and presented them certificates of merit. There three pupils were Irma Rader, Kenneth Ulm and Arthur K. Johnson. Charles H. May, president of the board of education, then called by name each member of the class, who stood up one by one until the class in its entirety stood, together to sing their class song for the last time together. The words to this song were written by Alice Roof. Then each member walked across the stage to accept the diploma from Mr. May, who has been a member of the board for 12 years, and who remembered the graduates when they had entered the Circleville public schools in the first grade. The Rev. B. C. Peters closed another graduation night with a carefully chosen benediction.

Unable to Walk—Drives Taxi and Plays Fiddle

"Mac" Turner

"Mac" Turner, who never walked, goes to dances.

He drives a taxi, as well. But his regular job is telephone operator in The Ohio Bell Telephone Company exchange at Rushville.

Life plays peculiar pranks on people. It erects barriers and creates handicaps. For some the problem of unraveling destinies seems unusually difficult.

But for Mac Turner there exist no handicaps. He plays a fiddle for square dances. He drives a "five-ty" through an ingenious arrangement of bars, ropes and pulleys. Until recently he used the car as a taxi when his duties as telephone operator permitted.

In spite of the handicap of not being able to walk, a handicap created by infantile paralysis years ago, Turner gets along better than many people. He is married and has two children, a daughter 22 years of age and a boy, nine. He is never ill and the various means which he has devised enable him to get about without any great inconvenience.

Mac Turner's life is an interesting story well worth the attention of many who are more fortunate. He went to school in Harmony township, Morrow county, in a little wagon drawn by a pair of goats, recalling the nursery rhyme of Mary and her lamb. Instead of taking a little lamb to school, Mac took a pair of goats—or rather, the goats took him.

He became an employee of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company as an operator at Sparta in 1909. He held this position for 13 years and subsequently came to Rushville to take the place that he now holds.

Rushville serves some 300 subscribers and Mac has a speaking acquaintance with every one of them. He's an operator, he says, but also chief operator, information, trouble clerk, and anything else that one might think of in connection with the telephone business in Rushville. He knows the voices of practically all of his patrons and often does them personal services.

At night Mac sleeps with one ear open and telephone service never ceases in Rushville. If a subscriber wishes to place a call at 1 a. m., an alarm bell brings Mac from his bed to the switchboard, so that in case of emergency he is at hand to render quick service. When he plays for dances, Mrs. Turner or the daughter or an auxiliary operator, who is also employed occasionally during afternoons, takes charge of the switchboard.

Two gallons of barn paint in a one-gallon can

Here's how you can paint your barn at a great saving. To each gallon of LOWE BROTHERS DERBY RED BARN PAINT add a gallon of pure linseed oil. This makes two gallons of tough, wear-resisting paint.

Don't take chances on cheap paints loaded with gasoline, mineral oil, rosin, etc. Get Derby Red when you paint your barn. It's all paint—and double thick! It contains plenty of linseed oil when mixed according to directions. Low in price, too.

Wash your dishes with Melo

MELO softens hard water and makes it a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. A tablespoonful in the dishpan cuts grease, saves hands and makes the soap much more effective.

No scum forms. Scum is the result of the hardness in hard water combining with soap. But scum never forms in soft water. Scum never forms in water softened with Melo. Get it at your grocer's.

Unable to Walk—Drives Taxi and Plays Fiddle

"Mac" Turner

"Mac" Turner, who never walked, goes to dances.

He drives a taxi, as well. But his regular job is telephone operator in The Ohio Bell Telephone Company exchange at Rushville.

Life plays peculiar pranks on people. It erects barriers and creates handicaps. For some the problem of unraveling destinies seems unusually difficult.

But for Mac Turner there exist no handicaps. He plays a fiddle for square dances. He drives a "five-ver," through an ingenious arrangement of bars, ropes and pulleys. Until recently he used the car as a taxi when his duties as telephone operator permitted.

In spite of the handicap of not being able to walk, a handicap created by infantile paralysis years ago, Turner gets along better than many people. He is married and has two children, a daughter 22 years of age and a boy, nine. He is never ill and the various means which he has devised enable him to get about without any great inconvenience.

Mac Turner's life is an interesting story well worth the attention of many who are more fortunate. He went to school in Harmony township, Morrow county, in a little wagon drawn by a pair of goats, recalling the nursery rhyme of Mary and her lamb. Instead of taking a little lamb to school, Mac took a pair of goats—or rather, the goats took him.

He became an employee of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company as an operator at Sparta in 1909. He held this position for 13 years and subsequently came to Rushville to take the place that he now holds.

Rushville serves some 300 subscribers and Ma has a speaking acquaintance with every one of them. He's an operator, he says, but also chief operator, information, trouble clerk, and anything else that one might think of in connection with the telephone business in Rushville. He knows the voices of practically all of his patrons and often does them personal services.

At night Mac sleeps with one ear open and telephone service never ceases in Rushville. If a subscriber wishes to place a call at 1 a. m., an alarm bell brings Mac from his bed to the switchboard, so that in case of emergency he is at hand to render quick service. When he plays for dances, Mrs. Turner or the daughter or an auxiliary operator, who is also employed occasionally during afternoons, takes charge of the switchboard.

parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Hitler of W. Mound-st, was accompanied by a guest, Miss Martha Harlan. Miss Harlan's home is in Farmington, Mo., near St. Louis.

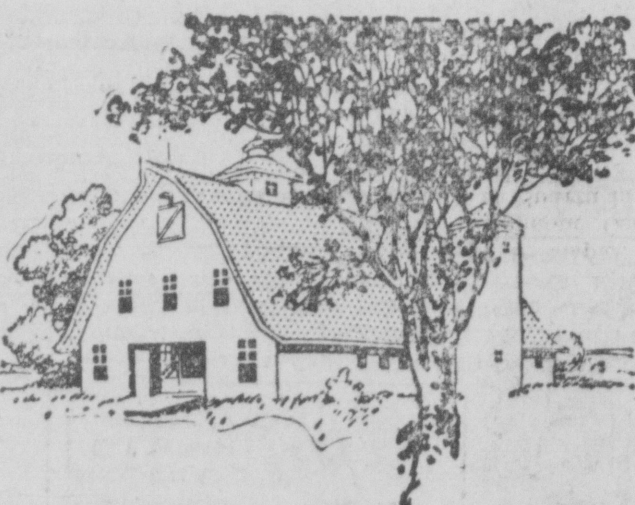

Russell L. Kneice, who has served three years in the United States army, has returned to his home on S. Clinton-st with his mother, Mrs. John Arledge and Mr. Arledge.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Howard returned Tuesday from a visit in Washington C. H., with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Story. Their granddaughter, Clara, accompanied them for a visit.
